

Arab-Israeli Relations

This program focuses on Arab-Israeli relations from World War I to the present. It examines the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict, comparing the narratives of the Palestinians, the Arab States, and Israel. We will analyze the relationships among Arabs and Israelis, as well as inter-Arab relations and the relations between the rivals and external powers. Field trips will visit ancient sites and also many of the places in which historical turning points in the peace process have taken place, including Jerusalem, the Golan Heights, Masada, and Eilat. We will also meet a number of Israeli and Palestinian policy makers and activists who will discuss past, present, and future efforts at conflict resolution. NOTE: All students enrolled in this program are required to attend the pre-departure orientation (Saturday, May 19, 2012) and the on-site orientation, which will both emphasize the special safety issues for this program.
